Martyrdom Details and History

The Teenage Hero of the Bloodied March-Martyr Md. Hasan

Martyr Introduction

Md. Hasanâ€™ born on January 1, 2006, in the quiet village of Kachia in Bholaâ€™ was a teenager with humble beginnings but lofty dreams. Poverty was a constant companion in his life, yet his spirit was full of hope and ambition. His father, Monir Hossain, worked as a day laborer, and his mother, Golenur Begum, a homemaker. As the eldest of three siblings, Hasan carried a heavy burden of responsibility far beyond his years.

Childhood and Early Life

Hasan's childhood was rooted in the scent of village soil and the simplicity of rural life. He studied in Class 7 at Kachia Sahamadar Secondary School. To support his family, he moved to Dhaka at a young age and began working at a small electronics shop called Ismail Electronics. His life was a balancing act between education and hard labor, a testament to his grit and resilience.

Economic Realities

Hasanâ€™s family lived in a rented house for BDT 5,000 a month. The entire household depended on Hasanâ€™s modest income, which never exceeded BDT 15,000 monthly. His younger brother Hasib is a Class 10 student, and his sister Jumaiya is in Class 9. Their eldest sister, Shahnaz, is married. Hasan was the familyâ€™s brightest hopeâ€™the sole flame of promise, carrying the weight of their future on his slender shoulders.

The Peopleâ€™s Uprising: Julyâ€“August 2024

In July and August 2024, Bangladesh witnessed a historic wave of resistance. The student-led quota reform movement evolved into a full-fledged peopleâ€™s uprising. The flames of dissent spread like wildfire across the nation. Hasanâ€™though only a teenagerâ€™joined the movement with unwavering courage.

On August 5, 2024, after the fall of the autocratic Hasina regime, streets across the country erupted in joy. Hasan, too, was swept up in this tide of victory. â€œIâ€™m joining the victory march,â€ he told his mother as he left home for Jatrabariâ€™unaware that history was about to mark his name in blood.

How He Was Martyred

The procession moved with excitement, chants of victory echoing, flags waving high. Then came the brutal response from the state. Without warning, the police opened fire on the unarmed crowd. Teenager Hasan was struck by a bullet and collapsed, bleeding on the street.

He remained missing for days, then weeks, and eventually months. His devastated family searched endlessly, clinging to hope. Only on February 13, 2025, did the truth come to light—DNA tests confirmed the identity of the martyred boy. His body was finally retrieved from the morgue of Dhaka Medical College and laid to rest in the beloved soil of his village, Kachia, following a tearful funeral.

The Family Today

Today, Hasan's family is devastated—emotionally and economically. The boy who carried their hopes is no more. They have no permanent shelter, no stable income. His father, now over 55, continues to work as a day laborer, but the household remains in deep crisis. The education of Hasan's siblings hangs in the balance, threatened by poverty.

Hasan's mother still cannot speak of her son without breaking into tears.

Voices of Grief

Hasan's younger brother Hasib, with a trembling voice, says,

“My brother always said he would grow up and build us a proper home. Now he's gone forever.”

His mother, Golenur Begum, recalls,

“That day he said, ‘Ma, I'm just going out for a bit.’ I never imagined that would be the last time I saw him.”

Not an End, But a Beginning

Martyrs like Hasan do not disappear. They live on in the eyes, hearts, and struggles of the next generation. He gave his life for dreams of justice and democracy. His sacrifice will remain etched in the nation's history as a symbol of youth-led courage.

Recommendations

1. Employment Support: Ensure job placement for Hasan's father or brother to bring stability to the family.
2. Permanent Shelter: Build a house for the family to secure their basic dignity and preserve the memory of the martyr.
3. Educational Support: Cover the full educational expenses of Hasan's siblings to honor and carry forward his dreams.
